There is no beating Willie Hoppe. He can't be handicapped within reason and be in danger from any billiard sharks now doing business. Last night in New York Hoppe won the 18-2 handicap tournament by defeating Walker Cochran, the young Chicagoan, running his string of 500 while Cochran was getting 18. In this burst of scoring Hoppe made a new high run in competition of 308. Cochran, who had been undefeated, finished second in the tourney. Sutton, Slosson, Yamada and Mayer finished in the order named.

And now it transpires that no representative of the Denver boxing syndicate will be in Chicago tomorrow to talk terms for a Welsh-White battle for the lightweight championship. The Denver people stand pat on their offer of $12,500 and railroad fare as Welsh's share of the receipts and refuse to raise the ante a bit. They are right. With what he would make out of the moving pictures Welsh would get a lot more than any prizefighter is worth. He is probably remembering the purse slipped Packey McFarland and Mike Gibbons, but Mike and Packey were the two most overpaid men in the world when they fought in New York, and they killed big purses for some time to come.

Sam Langford and Sam McVey, two colored gentlemen, fought ten rounds to a draw in New York. And they really fought, going on with the knowledge that the purse would be held up if there was any stalling.

Ted Lewis, the British lightweight, floored Jimmy Duffy nine times in the first round at Boston before the Buffalo lightweight would stay down. Duffy went down first in the initial ten seconds of the round.

Jimmy Britt, former lightweight champion, has joined an Australian regiment and is en route to the Dardanelles. Britt was on a vaudeville tour in the Antipodes when the war fever struck him.

Mike Gibbons and Young Ahearn will meet in St. Paul for a ten-round fight the night of Dec. 10.

Agitation has been begun at the University of Wisconsin to oust Bill Juneau as coach of the Badger football team. This year's Wisconsin material at the start of the season was touted as the best the Madison school has seen for some time and there was general mourning among graduates and students when successive defeats came from Chicago, Illinois and Minnesota. Juneau was blamed.

Now some of the Badger enthusiasts are boosting the stock of Gilmore Dobie, coach of the University of Washington, whose people haven't lost a game for more years than Dobie can remember. Dobie's boast is that throughout his career as a high school and college football coach he has never lost a game.

Dobie is said to be willing to accept a job with the Badgers and has wired his terms. Juneau's contract expires Jan. 1.

Cornell is a heavy favorite over Pennsylvania in their annual football game tomorrow. A victory for the Big Red team will leave it at the front in eastern football, tied with Pittsburgh, which should have an easy time downing Penn State.

Capt. Bierman of the University of Wisconsin is the only leader of a Conference eleven who does not graduate next summer. Left End Baston was yesterday elected to head the Gophers in 1916.

Eleven teams, ten of them tied for the lead, are still pedaling around the track at the Coliseum in the six-day bicycle race. Young and Kopsky are two laps back of the leaders. Sprints have been common in the last few hours, but the men are far behind the record for such competition. Spills have been infrequent and the riders appear to be in excellent condition for a strong finish.

Tonight and the early hours of tomorrow should result in some shifts
